Ex-Residents Tell about Early Days Living in Springhill Lake

by Barbara Likowski

Picture a community that was close-knit, where fathers went off to work and in the evening to graduate or law schools and mothers stayed home with the children. Facilities were within walking distance, an elementary school, a junior high school, a grocery store, pharmacy, and a pizza parlor so that families could make do with the one car needed by the father. An obstetrician and pediatrician lived in the community.

For the children there was a staffed center, called the Community House, where they could learn things like archery, fencing, arts and crafts, and how to play the guitar. There were swimming pools and a ballfield which was laid out by the fathers, also Boy and Girl Scout troops, Cubs and Brownies and a nursery school for the younger children.

When baseball season opened, the children, wearing their uniforms, marched throughout the community.

In the evenings their parents had dances in the Community House and pool parties.

An attractive, landscaped community, clean and well kept became a real home to residents and their sense of community developed.

Sounds a lot like Greenbelt, especially the old Greenbelt, doesn't it? Well, it was Greenbelt — a new part added to the old Greenbelt in the '60s

— the Springhill Lake apartment complex.

Chautauqua

A chautauqua, organized by the city's Millennium Committee was presented at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center on Saturday, April 21. Moderator Jim Giese told about the construction of Springhill Lake and related some anecdotes about the original owners. A panel of former residents, Gil and Micki Weidenfeld, Marsha and Ray Krasnick, and Bernie McGee Giese and Joyce Chestnut, who has lived there for over 30 years, kept their audience wanting to know more.

They told how they became organized as a PTA, wanting to be a part of their children's school. Bob McGee and Marsha Krasnick became PTA presidents. PTA meetings were very well attended and often it was standing room only.

The fathers organized ball teams and laid out the ballfield near the school. It is no longer there.

A Democratic Club was formed and the residents became politically active. They kept a record of who voted and called to remind those who didn't. Campaign literature was hand-delivered to all the apartments. Many worked long hours. When 96 percent of voters there voted for Hubert Humphrey, they were sure he had won and were shocked to discover that others, outside their community, did not agree with them. They also had a large turnout for Jimmy Carter. Local politics also interested them and they helped elect Joel Katz and Gil Weidenfeld to City Council (Weidenfeld later becoming mayor). Minor skirmishes involving local candidates occurred and the panel seemed to enjoy the retelling of these.

Panelists told of their first view of the apartment complex — how they felt immediately at home. They worked to keep the area clean and neat. There was so little crime that when the Krasnick's son's new bike was stolen and found on the porch of another resident, Marsha insisted that the residents be evicted. "We didn't want any thieves," she said. In spite of the reluctance of management to evict them, eventually they were evicted.

When there was a need for more space for growing families, many had to move, a lot of them to other parts of Greenbelt. Chestnut said she stayed and enjoyed living there. When she first came, her rent was $100-plus dollars per month. Now it is a thousand.

Several had children who came back to Greenbelt to live, proving, they thought, that the Greenbelt way of life was important to them.

Hanging on every word, those present asked many questions. When asked if African-Americans

Planning Board Discusses Critical Metroland Issues

by Barbara Bonham Young

Critical issues related to the proposed Metroland development were discussed at the April 18 meeting of the city's Advisory Planning Board. Matters related to transportation and the goal of creating a transit-oriented development received most attention. Community Planner Terri Hruby outlined the issues and said that the Advisory Planning Board should look at the plan and "decide what kind of development we should look for here." A public hearing on the plans, to be held by the Prince George's County Planning Board, is tentatively scheduled for June 18.

Hruby said the conceptual plan for the project recommends rezoning to Mixed Use Transit (MXT), the highest density mixed-use zoning category. It contains no restrictions on building height. However, she said, it is anticipated that a development district overlay zone (DDOZ) will be applied to the MXT zoning to provide for some restrictions.

In the group's discussion of the proposed five-lane north-south connector road through the project, implications for the future of Cherrywood Lane and Breezewood Lane, environmental impacts, the proposed Beltway interchange and other transportation issues were also considered. Planning and Community Development Director Celia Craze noted that the transportation analysis has been "sketchy," and said it contains a large number of assumptions about transit ridership. She said the board's observation that the local road network would be impacted is true, and noted that the sector plan does not analyze those issues. Board member Jim Drake stated his opinion that "Sunnyside pales beside what is going to happen here."

Classic Conflict

Craze called the development "a classic conflict between local and regional interests — between a program of smart growth and adequate public services."

The goal of making the development transit-reliant was discussed at some length. Craze

Overall Crime Is Down in City But Crime against Persons Is Up

by James Giese

Overall, crime in Greenbelt was down for the second year in a row according to the Greenbelt Police Department Statistical Report for the year 2000. The total number of class I offenses (the more significant crimes) dropped in number by one percent. Last year, the drop was over eight percent.

However, this year's decrease was caused by fewer crimes against properties (burglaries, breaking and enterings, theft and auto theft) which were down over five percent. On the other hand, the crimes against persons, such as murder, rape, robberies and assaults, were up by 34 percent with assaults increased by 16 percent and robberies up 33 percent. Only rapes were down with eight having been reported in 2000 as compared to 12 in 1999.

There were three murders committed in 2000. In recent years, there has been an average of two murders committed each year. Two of the crimes took place in Springhill Lake on June 1 when a husband and wife were shot and killed in a dispute with their neighbor. The other occurred on September 19 when three juveniles attempted to rob a couple walking from the Greenbelt Metro Station on Greenbelt Metro Drive and the husband was stabbed and killed. In both cases, police arrested and charged persons with the crimes.

While up, neither robberies or assaults reached the record highs previously achieved in the 1990's. Burglaries and breaking and enterings were down by 13 percent to 158, the lowest number since 1996. At 903 crimes reported, thefts were the lowest in the past five years and down seven percent. However, auto thefts were up seven percent from the previous year and at 287 were more than in any of the past five years.

Locations

Of the five sectors of the city used for police crime statistics, the Springhill Lake sector reported the most crimes, 507 and the most crimes against persons, 142. Also in Greenbelt West, the Beltway Plaza was third highest in total crimes and the highest for property crimes (theft), although Springhill Lake was a close second in this category. These areas had a slight decrease in crime over the previous year.

Greenbelt East was the second highest police sector for crimes. However, this sector combines both large residential neighborhoods and a major shopping center. The 93 crimes against persons was significantly below the 142 that occurred in Springhill Lake. The 362 property crimes in this sector brought total crimes reported to 455. The central sector of Greenbelt, between Kenilworth Avenue and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway was the sector in which the fewest crimes were reported—291 and 50 fewer than in 1999.

Arrests

Enforcement actions of the police department dropped significantly in 2000 as compared to 1999. At 699, adult arrests were down by 16 percent. The 394 juvenile arrests were four percent fewer than in 1999. Traffic summonses (1,753) were down 11 percent and the number of parking tickets issued dropped by almost ten percent to 1,126.

Greenbelt police arrested 766 persons, of which 34 percent were city residents, 41 percent county residents, and 23 percent were from outside of Prince

3,000 Greenbelt Students Attend County Schools

by Mary Moien

More than 3,000 Greenbelt students attend Prince George's County public schools, according to statistics based on this school year. Over 40 percent of those are elementary age students. Another 12 percent go to middle school, with the remaining 37 percent attending high school. The accompanying charts show figures for the schools that enroll the majority of Greenbelt students.

Note that these school figures are not the total enrollment for the school, but only for Greenbelt students. All of these schools have students coming from other neighborhoods.

Elementary schools

Forty percent of all Greenbelt elementary age students attend Springhill Lake Elementary — 591 students. And this does not include the 71 sixth graders who now attend Greenbelt Middle School to help alleviate overcrowding at Springhill Lake Elementary. Greenbelt Elementary School has 352 Greenbelt students, while Magnolia has 237 Greenbelters, mainly those from Greenbelt East.

Some students attend elementary schools farther away due to their desire to attend a magnet program, such as one at Glenarden Woods Elementary School. Some Springhill Lake Apartment students are also still being bused to Oakcrest Elementary for desegregation reasons. The high number of other elementary schools attended by Greenbelt children probably relates to the transfer of younger students to schools close to childcare facilities for before-and

In Defense of Fleas

In a recent letter to the News Review, John Papp asks some interesting questions. As the ringmaster of the Acme Miniature Circus, I feel compelled to give some interesting answers:

Q: Why Fleas?
A: The microscope was developed by the Dutch scientist Anton van Leeuwenhoek to study the lifecycle of the flea. For some time afterward, the microscope was known as the "Flea Glass." Von Leeuwenhoek is famous for having said, "God's greatest wonder is in his smallest creature." (Naturally, he said it in Dutch!)

The Acme Miniature Circus helps to promote respect and wonder for all life forms, even the ones who occasionally (pardon the pun) bug us. The flea circus is perhaps the only positive aspect of fleas that the general public gets a chance to see. It is the Acme Miniature Circus which promotes a campaign to "Save the Fleas" through bumperstickers, T-shirts, and pins. (After all, it did work for the whales.)

Q: Couldn't the time, energy, and money being spent on these flea circuses be better spent to help the less fortunate?

A: And who is less fortunate than a flea? Reviled by billions, hunted by pest control companies, scratched at by dogs, cats, and humans alike. The flea is truly the least fortunate creature of them all.

The resources being used to promote the flea circus (and there are perhaps only five in the world) are tiny in comparison to our defense budget, to our welfare budget, or quite frankly, to the budget of nearly every company in America. If we are going to start picking apart budgets, perhaps we should start with our tax dollars being paid out to farmers in order to NOT grow food. But that would make too much sense, now wouldn't it?

Q: What has the community of Greenbelt gained by having the flea circus come to town?

A: Nothing but joy, laughter, amazement, entertainment, education, and some thriftily priced flea circus memorabilia (available at every show).

One thing the community is not left with is fleas. The fleas I use in my show are highly trained and very rare and valuable insects. Midge and Madge are my co-workers and my friends. It is a 100% ironclad guarantee of the Acme Miniature Circus that no one leaves the show with more fleas than they came in with.

I invite all interested parties to attend the show and see for themselves the curious natural wonder of the most minuscule show on Earth.

Equal Time for Dogs

One of the advantages of living in a highly intelligent community is the opportunity for rigorous intellectual debate through letters to the editor of the local paper. And when the participants are as literate as you, age should not matter. (I am a kid of 54.)

You (John Papp, April 19 issue, "Why Fleas?") make the same point as did the assistants of Jesus when He was honored at a party. His answer was, "The poor are always with you,

Corrections
Staff of the News Review deeply regret the crucial omission in last week's Thomas Hieber obituary, concerning memorial services. The story should have concluded as follows: Friends are welcome to attend a memorial service at the Greenbelt Community Church on Friday, April 27 at 2 p.m., followed by a reception in the fellowship hall.

Astronomy Day is Saturday, April 28. Last week's issue offered two dates. We regret the error.

Children who register for kindergarten in the Prince George's County schools must be five years old no later than December 31, 2001. The wrong date was given in last week's paper.

but I'm not always going to be here." And I think this answer is applicable here. Most of the people who work on improving the environment are our hardworking neighbors who come home from a hard day's work and spend their "leisure" time cleaning up streams, fighting developers, and having long, boring meetings to plan to do even more. (I invite you to come to some of these.) In Greenbelt, I hope that the poor environmentalists are always with us.

But I also invite you to participate in Clown Month, because you will probably never have such an opportunity to learn to appreciate showmanship just from the 1/2 hour it takes to observe the flea circus. See how the crowd is manipulated, and then better understand how it is done by large corporations. And remember that every form of paid entertainment in Greenbelt is taxed to help the city with among other things, improvement to the cultural and physical environment. We don't actually disagree on this subject. I just have a broader view that shows where an occasional flea circus fits in with the ongoing experiment of Greenbelt. It's a wonderful thing when we can grow in our understanding of things, and learn to appreciate our "opponent's" point of view, whether or not we can agree with it or even condone it.

For example, the only thing that distresses me about the flea circus is that I couldn't bring my dogs! This form of discrimination has to stop! After all, the fleas in the circus are human fleas, not dog fleas. And my dogs are interested in things like this! We need a positive cultural environment for our dogs, too!

Sorry. Just clowning a bit. Makes life in Greenbelt even more fun.

The Secret Circus Premieres May 5

The circus is coming to town — the "Secret Circus," that is. The Greenbelt Arts Center's production stars 25 young actors from Greenbelt, who are hard at work learning lines, songs and dances for the Saturday, May 5 premiere. Greenbelter Chris Cherry created the play, which tells the story of Anya, a young girl who is forced to flee her village when the sinister Paper Doll Police take power. Naturally, the Paper Doll Police believe that all people should be exactly alike, and Anya, who must use a stick to walk, is unwelcome in their regime. She takes refuge with a traveling circus, some of whose members have physical traits far more unusual than her own: there is a woman who looks like an elephant, a boy with flippers like a seal, and a lion who has never learned to roar. Living among these circus folk, Anya is forced to examine her own fears about differences and fitting in.

"I'm very pleased with the script and score," said Cherry, who wrote 15 songs for the show. "Most of all, though, I'm proud of the young actors. They are enthusiastic in rehearsal and work diligently on their parts at home." The spontaneity and naturalness of the young actors are qualities envied by the professional adult actors he teaches at the Shakespeare Theatre's Academy for Classical Acting, he added.

Cherry has directed children's productions for the Greenbelt Recreation Department's Creative Kids Camp for the last two years and created last season's "Hidden Lands" at the arts center. Part of his approach is to have the kids work with professional artists in other disciplines. Fiber artist Elizabeth Morissette, an artist-in-residence at the Greenbelt Community Center, is helping the actors create two circus banners using batik. Greenbelt's clown laureate, Adam Gertsacov, presented a workshop for the actors on clowning technique.

The Secret Circus will run Saturday and Sunday, May 5 and 6, at 6 p.m. at the arts center. There is also a preview performance on Saturday, May 5, at 10 a.m. Tickets are available from the arts center box office at 301-441-8770.

Hieber of Port Richey, Fla.; sisters Marion Vaughn of Halethorpe, Md. and Janet Hieber of Port Richey; and brother Jim Hieber of Springfield, Va.

Memorial services will be held in Oceanside and Greenbelt. Friends are welcome to attend a memorial service at the Greenbelt Community Church on Friday, April 27 at 2 p.m., followed by a reception in the fellowship hall.

A Review

All the Good Folks

by Nick Mydra

Geff King has never sounded better.

As part of the entertainment for "Music on Center," Geff and his partner Matt Levine performed bluegrass and country music last Saturday evening at the Roosevelt Center Mall. The promo material I saw said it was "brought to you by the good folks at the New Deal Café with help from the City of Greenbelt and Public Works." According to Richard McMullin, director of music for the New Deal Café, it was a "party for the town" and to celebrate one year at the current location. Matt and Geff were on. They played outside in front of the New Deal Café with Matt on steel guitar and Geff on acoustic. You may have seen them on other occasions in a four or five piece group, or first Geff alone. Geff, the former music director at the Café, is always willing and able to fill in, grab a guitar or just join in a chorus or two. On one or two of those occasions he wasn't on top of his form, but Saturday he was the best I have heard him. Songs like Roger Miller's "King of the Road," Roy Orbison's "Crying." Playing country and bluegrass numbers like "Please Search Your Heart Before It's Too Late," and Carter Stanley's "Don't Go Out Tonight Little Darlin'." Tight bluegrass harmony with both Matt and Geff doing excellent jobs on their instruments as well as vocals.

As I was watching them perform I looked around the Center and saw people hanging out. The movie theater just let out and people were coming to and fro. People stopping off at the Chinese restaurant or strolling by on their way to the grocery store. Things were happening. And this could have been brought to you by the good folks at Guys Shoes, put on in front of the Chatterbox Café, and don't forget it's where "all the men are good looking, all the women are strong, and all the children are above average."

posed the question, are "smart growth" and transit-related development the same thing? She suggested the board consider whether the development is going to encourage Metro ridership, and also to consider what population the plan will encourage to live near the Metro, noting that high-end housing is part of the development's plan. She asked them to consider if these residents would be the people riding Metro.

Craze discussed the need for project uses that complement one another and spread demand out over the day, noting that current plans will create a "very heavy daytime population," not a 24-hour environment. "You want to create a space that people want to visit," she pointed out.

Hruby stated that the sector plan needs to define where residential buildings will be placed. She also noted that the current senior housing location on the plan is far from the Metro. Board member Earl Taylor described the transit-oriented development at Pentagon City and other board members briefly discussed projects elsewhere in the region.

Craze reiterated that there is a serious question about whether the proposed magnitude of development can be accommodated by the road network. She noted that the city has hired two consultants to review traffic and environmental issues connected with the proposed development and said their reports are expected at the end of the month.

The next meeting of the advisory board is set for May 2 at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Center.

lived in the community, the answer was no. But in 1968, after the passage of the fair housing act, the community became multicultural.

A small crowd attended, possibly it would have been larger if there hadn't been conflicting times given for the event. This reporter came an hour late. But there was so much to learn about how times had been and some in the audience said they would like to see the same spirit emerge that was present in those earlier times. With the building of an addition to the Springhill Lake Recreation Center, the plans for which were presented by Recreation Community Center Supervisor Joe McNeal, it was hoped the added room would encourage more adult participation; the children have been participating all along.

CRIME

George's County.

Of the adults arrested, 26 percent were reported by the police department as being white persons, and 69 percent African-American. According to the 2000 U. S. Census figures, Greenbelt's racial composition is almost equally divided between African-Americans and whites. Of the 22 categories of crimes for which the police department reported racial composition for arrests, only in one category, driving while intoxicated, were whites arrested more often.

The Greenbelt police report that of the juveniles arrested, 80 percent were African-Americans and 16 percent white. Although census information is not yet available, it is believed that the ratio of juvenile African-Americans to whites in Greenbelt is much higher than for adults. In only one of the 23 categories of crimes for which juvenile arrests were made, did the number of whites being charged exceed that of the number of African-Americans, and that was for possession of a controlled dangerous substance.

Other Activities

While calls for service increased by over four percent to a record high of 37,710 for the year, the number of police reports taken dropped by more than nine percent to the lowest number in five years at 8,587. The number of hours foot patrolling also dropped from 4,483 in 1999 to 3,864 in 2000 but this year 1,692 additional hours of bicycle patrolling were reported, the first year that this activity has been reported. The number of calls for the K-9 unit (police dogs) dropped in the year with 264 calls being made as compared to 404 for the previous year.

Traffic accidents (1,211) were the highest that they have been in the past five years and almost nine percent higher than in 1999. There was one fatality this year, which is about average for Greenbelt. The good news is that while the number of accidents was higher, the number of personal injuries at 135 dropped to a five-year low.

Audubon Society Holds Spring Walk

Join members of the Prince George's Audubon Society from 7 to 10 a.m. on Saturday, May 5, for a walk along the roads and trails of the Fran Uhler Natural Area of the Patuxent River Park to look for spring migrants, the return of local birds, and early wildflowers. This beautiful forested floodplain is at the end of Lemons Bridge Road off Rt. 197. Call Fred or Jane Fallon at 301-249-1518 for more information.

Girl Scouts Eschew Cookies for Science

On Saturday, April 28, 900 local Girl Scouts from the Girl Scout Council of the Nation's Capital (GSCNC) will meet at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center, to show that they are more than cookie saleswomen. During "cookie season" the choices are Do-si-does or Thin Mints; but on "solar day," these Girl Scouts will have limitless choices in earth and space science exploration.

From 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Brownies, Girl Scouts, troop leaders, and parents will gather in the Building 8 auditorium to participate. Throughout the day, visitors can peruse and engage in hands-on interactive exhibits that will challenge the girls to become interested in different fields of science.

Karen Brown, a programs specialist with the Girl Scout Council of the Nation's Capital, says that today's Girl Scout has an optimistic future ahead of her. When the 2012 Initiative began in 1992, the objective was to encourage Girl Scouts' interest in science, math, and engineering, hoping that once they graduated they would pursue careers in those fields. Brown states, "To date, this initiative has made re-

Public Forum Will Discuss Land Use

The Prince George's County Planning Board of The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (M-NCPPC) will hold a public forum to identify key issues of residents, property owners, the business community and public officials regarding the County's future growth and development policies. The public forum is the first step in a formal process aimed at amending the overall land use planning framework for the county's General Plan.

The public forum will be held on Tuesday evening, May 1, in the first floor hearing room of the County Administration Building in Upper Marlboro. An informational display and question and answer session will begin at 6 p.m.; the public testimony portion of the forum will begin at 7 p.m.

The Prince George's County General Plan sets forth broad, comprehensive policy recommendations to guide future development countywide. The county has adopted three General Plans to date: the 1964 Plan, which contained general recommendations for the location, type and intensities of different land uses in the county; the 1982 Plan, which concentrated on overall development policies; and the 2000 Biennial Growth Policy Plan, adopted by the Prince George's County Council as the Interim General Plan.

Persons who wish to speak at the May 1 public forum may register in advance by calling the M-NCPPC Public Affairs Office at 301-952-4584; TTY 301-952-3796. Those unable to attend the public forum, or those wishing to supplement their oral comments may submit written comments by May 16 to: Elizabeth M. Hewlett, Chairman, Prince George's County Planning Board, 14741 Governor Oden Bowie Drive, Upper Marlboro, Maryland 20772.
